Will C. Toung, owner of stock in the Young-Pierce Oil Company, has begun a Supreme Court action for an account-ing against the officers and directors of that corporation. In its initial notice of this litigation the Sun and New York HERALD inadvertantly omitted the name "Young" from the title of the corporation, and it now takes this opportunity of stating that the litigation has no con-nection with the Pierce Oil Corporation, an entirely different concern. In his complaint against the Young-Pierce Oil Company the plaintiff alleges Internationa that dividends have been paid which have not been warranted by the earnings of the company, and he wants the company enjoined from declaring further dividends pending the trial of his action. He also wants the court to determine whether or not the company has been damaged by the action of the directors, and, if so, that the court adjudicate that the corporate treasury is en
